those habits of mind. This book argues that we can learn to replace habits of mind that do not serve our purposes and provides some helpful exercises and practices to help us in the effort. These exercises encourage our awareness of both the habitual thoughts and the habitual emotional/body-felt reactions that make up these mental patterns. In my experience, this sometimes takes persistent practice, so fortunately Margaret Shepherd's generous website offers other resources to back us up and encourage us. More than just a pep talk, the model that is clearly explained in this book encourages us, once we have identified a strong vision, to transform negative experiences in life into "data" that can feed the development and manifestation of vision. In doubt? Offended? Encountering an obstacle? - How can we re-direct those potential time wasting and energy draining experiences toward a direction that serves our purposes? 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Moving Forward in Life By Jenn Fay Through creating a vision for my life, I have given myself the opportunity to move forward in life. This book gave me the tools to stay focused on what's important to me. It also explains the way the universe works that where we place our focus how we feel about our lives influences our life experience in a positive or a negative way. Our beliefs matter many of our beliefs learned in childhood don't serve us, for they keep us in this limited state - feeling unworthy of the desires of our hearts. The principles found in this book have the power to transform lives, if we will just use them everyday. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Vision Builders Manual 9 Steps to Panoramic Success for Your Company, Career or Cause By Fran I. Huey I have read this book over and over. The principles and clear set of skills are powerful and they work. In the past I had good vision but lacked the practical skill set to walk it out. This book gives step by step direction to take a vision into reality. A definite must read for those wanting to clarify their vision, put it into practice and bring it to fruition.
